FYI

- As you get older, your skin gets drier because oil and sweat glands slow their production.
- The skin is a living organ that requires a balanced environment to maintain its moisture and vitality. In most climates, however, skin cannot maintain the necessary level of moisturization on its own. In fact, it seems whatever climate you live in, your skin has to fight a battle against wind, sun, pollution, and even artificially controlled climates, which can ultimately mean battling dryness.
